LETTER FROM THE CEO

Every summer, PCA publishes Momentum Magazine, giving us an occasion to celebrate the impact the organization has made over the previous 12 months. And while PCA managed to surpass nearly every goal set for the first nine months of the year, this most recent four-month period has truly been uncharted territory given the COVID-19 crisis and the Black Lives Matter Movement.

It is virtually impossible to overstate the devastation this pandemic has had on our sports community. It is also equally impossible to ignore the Black Lives Matter movement and the role that sports play in battling racism. As the sports world is impacted by the pandemic and the Black Lives Matter movement, so is PCA, as sports are embedded in the culture and fabric of America. It has been heartbreaking to witness youth sports organizations call off their spring seasons, including the Little League World Series. Professional sports leagues, tournaments, games and other sporting events have also been canceled or suspended. Never before have we seen the NBA and NHL suspend their seasons, the NCAA cancel its remaining spring and winter championships or the PGA postpone the Masters. And while COVID-19 continues, we must also turn our attention to the deadly and destructive crisis we have endured for centuries: the ugly and undeniable truth of systemic anti-Black injustice.

This has all resulted in an unprecedented level of anxiety in young people, as they find themselves grounded at home without sports, cut off from their friends, having spent the rest of the academic school year remotely with the worry of how this economic downturn may impact their families.

Because we understand that life is a team sport, it is my belief that what Positive Coaching Alliance provides to our community has never been more relevant or more needed than it is today, in order to maintain a healthy mindset for our children and work to give them a better world, one in which bigotry, oppression, hatred, and violence are truly unacceptable. Our program teaches athletes the value of being a good teammate; it builds strong character and develops leaders into something that matters. These lessons provide the fundamental social and emotional learning skills that are just as relevant to managing anxiety in life, as they are on the field, the court or the ice. During these stressful and uncertain times, PCA provided and will continue to provide support for our communities most impacted by these crises.

As we evolve towards what will be a "new normal" throughout sports, we at PCA believe there will be a tremendous opportunity to build a better future for youth, regardless of neighborhood, race, zip code or socioeconomic status. In this country, there has always been a huge divide due to anti-Black racism and between kids in low-income communities and those who come from families with greater financial means, in terms of access to sports. We intend to renew our focus on play equity by ensuring that PCA training reaches kids in underserved communities. This is a great passion of mine, and as you will read throughout this magazine, is something PCA has only started to pursue.

I am thrilled to be a part of this organization and proud to see every member of the PCA team rally together over the last few months to help our community make it through these crises. Soon, once parents feel reassured from the public health community and sports providers that the environment is safe for their kids to return to play, youth sports will be back with a vengeance. And while we return to play, we cannot ignore the anti-Black racism that has long plagued our nation. While we return, coaches in our country will need to use their platform to teach their athletes that they have innate value and dignity that are neither defined nor limited by their race, color, creed, gender, sexual orientation, or resources.

READ PCA'S STATEMENT ABOUT HOW SPORTS CAN BATTLE RACISM ON THE NEXT PAGE: As a force in education through sports, we vow not to stop at condemnation...

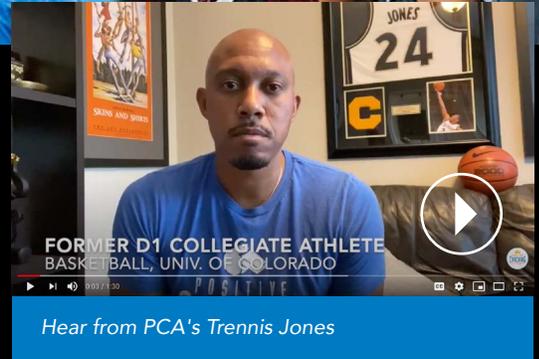

SPORTS CAN BATTLE RACISM

As a force in education through sports, we vow not to stop at condemnation, but to strive to be a force for reconciliation, through the collaborative actions with coaches throughout our country.

George Floyd was murdered. Our hearts mourn for not only his family, but for those of Ahmaud Arbery, Breonna Taylor, Tony McDade, and every other Black family that has experienced the devastating loss of a loved one due to senseless police violence and anti-Black racism. These past few weeks have succeeded in shining a light on a deadly and destructive crisis we have endured for centuries: the ugly and undeniable truth of systemic anti-Black injustice. We hope the rest of the sports community will join us in fighting anti-Black racism.

PCA has openly and decisively condemned all forms of bigotry, hatred, and violence. Black Lives Matter. Sports has the intrinsic power to transform lives and unify communities. When sports are done right, they cannot fix anti-Black racism alone, but the positive and inclusive actions of coaches, parents, student-athletes, organizational and school leaders throughout the country can start to reverse an age-old trend of systemic racism.

As a force in education through sports, we vow not to stop at condemnation. PCA will instead strive to be a driving force for reconciliation by partnering with coaches and leaders across the country, providing them with tools needed to foster a culture of diversity, equity and inclusion. We know that athletes and coaches can play a substantive role in furthering racial equality and social justice. The successful development of ANY athlete includes parallel development of courage, resilience, and character not limited to a field, court, pool or rink.

"Sport has the power to change the world, it has the power to inspire. It has the power to unite people in a way that little else does. It speaks to youth in a language they understand."

- NELSON MANDELA

“Now more than ever, we need to be good teammates to one another.”

Our most meaningful achievements are defined by how well we succeed with others. It's up to us to use the skills learned on the playing field to work together as a team, especially now!

While sports were on hiatus, it was important for us to be intentional about the ways in which we all work together to build the character that fulfills potential and develops leaders—across the globe, across the country and in every way we can. Spectator, parent, coach, and athlete, everyone has a role to play.

And that's why we're an alliance.
A Positive Coaching Alliance.

Because we believe life is a team sport, PCA, through our evidence-based curriculum, cultivates a positive, character-building environment that actively involves youth's social and emotional growth to ensure they take away the many life lessons that can be learned from sports done right.

As we return to Youth Sports, it is critical Coaches have the skills to deal with the social and emotional needs of our athletes as they emerge from the trauma of COVID-19.

SUSAN CROWN EXCHANGE GRANT

PCA Partners with Susan Crown Exchange to Train 400,000 Coaches in Youth Development

Mountain View, CA, July 7, 2020 – Over the next four years, Positive Coaching Alliance (PCA), the leading national non-profit dedicated to providing a positive, character-building experience for youth athletes, will partner with Chicago-based foundation Susan Crown Exchange (SCE) to train over 400,000 youth coaches to foster the social and emotional needs of youth athletes.

After seven years of funding initiatives in social and emotional learning (SEL), this partnership marks SCE's largest investment yet into youth sports. Combining physical activity, play, and collaboration, sports have near-limitless potential to help young athletes develop social and emotional skills like teamwork, empathy, and problem solving. These foundational skills boost young people's academic, career and life outcomes; they help young athletes succeed, both on and off the field.

Since late February, youth across the country have endured unprecedented challenges: virtual learning, racial injustice, and the health and economic impacts of COVID-19, to name a few. Many of those young people feel powerless and hopeless, and express both a desire for structure and uncertainty around the future. The magnitude of the impact this has had on kids is yet to be measured—but as young people return to play, coaches will need the tools to meet kids' social and emotional needs as they process this tumultuous time.

"Across the United States, forty million young people play sports each year. The coaches that make youth sports possible have a major impact on those young people's lives," says Haviland Rummel, Executive Director of the Susan Crown Exchange. "This partnership will help coaches across the country promote positive youth development, changing the lives of young athletes. As young people return to play after an incredibly tumultuous few months, this work will be more important than ever."

For more than two decades, PCA's mission has been to create a positive, character-building youth sports environment that results in "Better Athletes, Better People." It's clear that social and emotional development is critical for young people, and it's equally clear that coaches are important role models for the athletes they serve. By bringing training on SEL and youth development to coaches across the country, we can help them transform the lives of the millions of kids who play sports.

"Regardless of zip code or socioeconomic status, our children need and deserve all the support they can access during this incredibly complex and confusing time," said Chris Moore, CEO of PCA. "We've known for years that PCA's social and emotional training empowers coaches to develop athletes of character who will be good teammates to one another. With this partnership, and in this moment, we're looking to leverage PCA's partnership with coaches across the country to provide the training they need to support young people as they return to schools and youth sports."

In keeping with the organization's core belief that life is a team sport, PCA is actively looking for like-minded organizations and individuals to join its mission of addressing the social and emotional needs of youth athletes everywhere. To align with both organizations' commitment to ensuring a level playing field for the rising generation, regardless of access to resources, at least 50% of this training will support coaches in underserved communities.

SPORTS DONE RIGHT: FORNEY ISD

When it comes to “sports done right,” few organizations do it better than Forney ISD’s athletic program. Leading this effort is Forney ISD’s Athletic Director, Neal Weaver. Coach Weaver has been at the helm since 2011 and has guided the program by continuing to emphasize the development of well-rounded individuals. They constantly strive to build character, work-ethic, discipline, and both personal and team responsibility. And they expect their student-athletes to work hard in both the competitive arena and the classroom to prepare to be successful people after they graduate. PCA programming is front and center at Forney ISD’s annual LEAD student leadership summit, where emerging seniors from each sport at both high schools, along with head coaches from both schools, and community representatives, engage in leadership development and planning together.

Weaver said, "Forney ISD partners with PCA because we believe school sports deliver a tremendous personal growth potential to students, and there are best methods for participation. There are also optimal roles for athletes, coaches, and parents defined by PCA, and we believe a shared understanding of these roles will enable students' personal growth to be maximized. We strive to do things well, but first they must be done right. PCA helps reaffirm this path."

"PCA's message is simple and direct. Its resources are rich, diverse, and helpful, no matter a person's role in sports. Its methods are proven. The genius of PCA, it appears, is that it all seems so intuitive. Through PCA we realize where and when sports stray from what is best for kids, and we are clearly shown the course back to positive growth. We are reminded through PCA's culture of the right way. So we can get better, because that is what it is truly all about."

It's been great to see the success that Jim Thompson and PCA have had around the country, and Chris Moore is a great choice to lead things further. We have a very deep and rich sports culture in North Texas, with a lot of great leaders such as long-time supporters and board members Kenny Randle of Insperty, Jim Cochrane of the Texas Rangers, Steve Simpson of FOX Sports Southwest, and Bob Bowsby of the Big 12 Conference.

PCA provides a vital service in helping to improve performance by players, teams, coaches, and administrators, while still keeping the ultimate goal in mind of providing a positive experience to players and using the many situations that sports provide to teach important lessons that will help them throughout their lives.

I hope you'll join me in supporting PCA and our quest to build BETTER ATHLETES, BETTER PEOPLE."

“Youth sports and coaching had an enormous impact on my growth, development and discipline. I still believe that youth sports offer an amazing opportunity to teach, mentor, and build individual character in our future generations.

But we may have lost sight of some of the most important reasons to play sports – to build community, develop lifetime habits of fitness, and most of all, the emphasis on teamwork. This is why PCA has been so important to our communities for the last 20 years and why moving forward, it will be even more important as we embrace this opportunity to ‘reset’ sports.”
