We truly are one team. As I am writing this, we are in the middle of a global pandemic and we are all at home. All youth sports have been put on pause. It doesn’t matter what sport you play, where you live or how old you are. We are all in this together competing against the same opponent. We are all on the same team – One Team Washington.

I hope by the time you are reading this, we are back out there competing, cheering and playing. Youth sports, as with so many other things, will likely change forever due to this global pandemic, however, I believe the power of youth sports will become even greater. Our youth, now more than ever, need the life lessons sports have the unique power to teach.

The Positive Coaching Alliance mission is to create a more positive, character-building youth sports environment that results in BETTER ATHLETES, BETTER PEOPLE. When youth sports are done right, sports have the opportunity to teach life-long skills and values such as character, grit, resilience, teamwork, commitment and leadership. To truly HONOR THE GAME and unlock the power of sports, PCA focuses on coaches, organizations, parents and athletes.

Coaches are a powerful influence and our DOUBLE GOAL COACH methodology ensures we are balancing our desire to win while also building character. The club’s board owns their organization’s culture and our LEADING YOUR ORGANIZATION framework ensures we are creating the right DEVELOPMENT ZONE for kids. Parents are key to creating this development zone and our SECOND GOAL PARENT program provides parents practical information and tips to help them support, encourage and empower their child. Finally, we look to develop TRIPLE-IMPACT COMPETITORS by focusing our youth athletes to improve themselves, teammates and their sport as a whole.

Join us, as we go ALL IN to develop life lessons and positively impact our children’s lives forever through the power of sport!

Game On Washington!

SPORTS CAN BATTLE RACISM

As a force in education through sports, we vow not to stop at condemnation, but to strive to be a force for reconciliation, through the collaborative actions with coaches throughout our country.

George Floyd was murdered. Our hearts mourn for not only his family, but for those of Ahmaud Arbery, Breonna Taylor, Tony McDade, and every other Black family that has experienced the devastating loss of a loved one due to senseless police violence and anti-Black racism. These past few weeks have succeeded in shining a light on a deadly and destructive crisis we have endured for centuries: the ugly and undeniable truth of systemic anti-Black injustice. We hope the rest of the sports community will join us in fighting anti-Black racism.

PCA has openly and decisively condemned all forms of bigotry, hatred, and violence. Black Lives Matter. Sports has the intrinsic power to transform lives and unify communities. When sports are done right, they cannot fix anti-Black racism alone, but the positive and inclusive actions of coaches, parents, student-athletes, organizational and school leaders throughout the country can start to reverse an age-old trend of systemic racism.

As a force in education through sports, we vow not to stop at condemnation. PCA will instead strive to be a driving force for reconciliation by partnering with coaches and leaders across the country, providing them with tools needed to foster a culture of diversity, equity and inclusion. We know that athletes and coaches can play a substantive role in furthering racial equality and social justice. The successful development of ANY athlete includes parallel development of courage, resilience, and character not limited to a field, court, pool or rink.

"Sport has the power to change the world, it has the power to inspire. It has the power to unite people in a way that little else does. It speaks to youth in a language they understand."

- NELSON MANDELA

Read PCA’s Commitment to Change
While sports were on hiatus, it was important for us to be intentional about the ways in which we all work together to build the character that fulfills potential and develops leaders—across the globe, across the country and in every way we can. Spectator, parent, coach, and athlete, everyone has a role to play.

Our most meaningful achievements are defined by how well we succeed with others. It’s up to us to use the skills learned on the playing field to work together as a team, especially now!

And that’s why we’re an alliance. A Positive Coaching Alliance.

Because we believe life is a team sport, PCA, through our evidence-based curriculum, cultivates a positive, character-building environment that actively involves youth’s social and emotional growth to ensure they take away the many life lessons that can be learned from sports done right.

As we return to Youth Sports, it is critical Coaches have the skills to deal with the social and emotional needs of our athletes as they emerge from the trauma of COVID-19.
Mountain View, CA, July 7, 2020 – Over the next four years, Positive Coaching Alliance (PCA), the leading national non-profit dedicated to providing a positive, character-building experience for youth athletes, will partner with Chicago-based foundation Susan Crown Exchange (SCE) to train over 400,000 youth coaches to foster the social and emotional needs of youth athletes.

After seven years of funding initiatives in social and emotional learning (SEL), this partnership marks SCE’s largest investment yet into youth sports. Combining physical activity, play, and collaboration, sports have near-limitless potential to help young athletes develop social and emotional skills like teamwork, empathy, and problem solving. These foundational skills boost young people’s academic, career and life outcomes; they help young athletes succeed, both on and off the field.

Since late February, youth across the country have endured unprecedented challenges: virtual learning, racial injustice, and the health and economic impacts of COVID-19, to name a few. Many of those young people feel powerless and hopeless, and express both a desire for structure and uncertainty around the future. The magnitude of the impact this has had on kids is yet to be measured—but as young people return to play, coaches will need the tools to meet kids’ social and emotional needs as they process this tumultuous time.

“Across the United States, forty million young people play sports each year. The coaches that make youth sports possible have a major impact on those young people’s lives,” says Haviland Rummel, Executive Director of the Susan Crown Exchange. “This partnership will help coaches across the country promote positive youth development, changing the lives of young athletes. As young people return to play after an incredibly tumultuous few months, this work will be more important than ever.”

For more than two decades, PCA’s mission has been to create a positive, character-building youth sports environment that results in “Better Athletes, Better People.” It’s clear that social and emotional development is critical for young people, and it’s equally clear that coaches are important role models for the athletes they serve. By bringing training on SEL and youth development to coaches across the country, we can help them transform the lives of the millions of kids who play sports.
During the last three months of the COVID-19 pandemic, PCA pivoted to host over 150 Zoom Workshops! FOR OFFICIALS

Honoring the Game: The Official’s Role in Creating a Positive Youth Sports Culture
Coaches at Seattle Gymnastics Academy are passionate about sharing and instilling the benefits of gymnastics with their athletes, and that doesn’t mean just learning how to do the splits or a flip.

Gymnastics is a sport like no other – it requires physical discipline in strength and flexibility, power and control, balance and style. It also requires mental fortitude, confidence in yourself and trust in your coaches. It is both an individual and team effort. It is at times frustrating, but more often filled with satisfying accomplishments, both big and small.

SGA is not in the business of collecting medals, or obsessed with finding the next Olympian. We’re here to create a positive sports experience for the betterment our kids, and with that comes strong, hardworking athletes of who’s success we are immensely proud. The breadth of what is possible in gymnastics is vast, and that’s why SGA is focused on the process vs. the outcome – cultivating three main areas of focus: strength, skill and character. Strength, both of body and of mind; skill, both of gymnastics elements, but also skills for life; and character, building grit and perseverance, handling disappointment, and fostering a respect for the sport and each other. These core values offered us a perfect partnership with the Positive Coaching Alliance, which we started three years ago.

Over 80% of gymnasts at SGA are recreational, not competitive. On average, most of these athletes practice once a week. They are here for the love of the sport, and they work hard at each practice. To us, these recreational athletes embody the PCA mantra of ELM:

EFFORT: 100% effort every turn, every-time

LEARNING: Gymnasts who learn new skills, are en-route to mastering the sport

MISTAKES: It’s okay to make a mistake. Pick yourself up and try again!

Meanwhile, our competitive teams (Girl’s Junior Olympic, Boy’s Junior Olympic, Trampoline & Tumbling, and XCEL) also add PCA’s ROOTS to their tree of mastery: respecting Rules, Opponents, Officials, Teammates and Self. Competitive gymnastics is demanding and rewarding, and we are so thankful to have built an incredible group of coaches, gymnasts and parents on our teams that create an environment that fosters growth and decreases burnout. Along with this support system has come a level of success from our teams that we can’t help but celebrate and be proud of. In any competitive sport, winning is the desired outcome and why we compete, but we know it’s not everything. We believe that focusing on the process allows us to have successful outcomes, and the success comes organically; our teams and gymnasts win because they work hard and understand the process. But they aren’t fixated only on winning or their score.
For all of our gymnasts, we focus on positive first language - we work to give constructive corrections, instead of telling them what we don’t want – the how instead of just the what. For example, saying “squeeze your knees and thighs” instead of “don’t bend your legs!”

SGA is committed to exuding positivity and safety in the gymnastics world, and developing the full potential of our athletes and coaches through this sport that we love. PCA has helped keep our staff, coaches, parents and athletes focused on our big-picture goals, and helped strengthen our sense of community. In our three-year partnership, we’ve held 5 workshops together; for both our competitive and recreational coaches, and for parents of competitive gymnasts. We always include one PCA article in both our staff and customer monthly newsletter, and the breadth of material - from interviews with superstars like Steph Curry, to pieces from legendary coaches - helps expose our community to a multitude of different ideas.

We hope that when our gymnasts grow into adults, they will apply what they learned at SGA to life – and no, we don’t mean walking on their hands at family parties (though, that might come up from time to time!) – it means having the confidence in yourself to take a step that seems scary, and remembering that sometimes you will fall, but when you do, you have to get up, make a correction, and try again.

What is your background in youth soccer and why are you so passionate about it?
I became a part of WYS in 2009 when my son joined Ballard (Seattle) Youth Soccer as a 1st grader. At first I was an over-involved parent on the sidelines doing all the wrong things to coach my son to be his “best.” The fact that I have not actually even played on a soccer team myself didn’t stop me. My son also played Little League baseball and it was through them that I received my first PCA Better Athletes, Better People book written by Founder Jim Thompson. Thankfully, I read it and the coaching of myself to be a better sideline parent began. I also had begun to coach my daughter’s recreational soccer team and reading that book was the best thing I ever did for those players. Coaching is tough work sometimes and at the same time the privilege of facilitating positive growth is incredibly rewarding. My personal missions in life are 1) to bring out the best in myself and others and 2) to bring joy where I can, and working with youth allows me to do both of those with a large impact that will carry forward to the next generation.

How did you get involved in the leadership at WYSA?
As part of a Leadership course I was taking, I had to run a project in a community I felt passionate about. I chose my soccer community as both of my kids were now playing soccer and I was coaching my daughter’s Recreational team. As my project developed, I landed on my mission statement which hasn’t changed from that day, and is to create a positive space, where kids can play soccer with their friends, gain some skills, and become their best selves. When my project started I was Secretary of the Board for Ballard Youth Soccer, and then I became VP of Competition at Seattle Youth Soccer Association. While at SYSA I ran the “Hearts and Cleats” Task Force that brought PCA in for a three year partnership. Our goal was to change the culture around recreational soccer and make it more fun and positive, especially the parents sideline behavior.
Not long after that I met Terry Fisher (CEO/ Washington Youth Soccer) while checking my son’s team in for USYS Regional Championships. I shared my project with him, as I was hoping to enlist his help in my project. He turned to me at one point and asked me, “Why aren’t you on our Board?” We have been working together ever since then!

How has the partnership with PCA benefitted your organization?

70% of the players in WYS are recreational level. While all of our players need their coaches and parents to show up positively, Select and Premier players have the benefit of club funding to aid in their coach development. Changing our culture from one that is scoreboard driven to one that is focused on the Development Zone is critical to us. The training many of our clubs and associations have had has been reported back to us as some of the best training sessions they have engaged with. We have been able to make anecdotal impact on our sideline behavior, and our clubs are beginning to bravely take on their parents through PCA-Parent partnership courses. All of our member associations and their clubs are free to take advantage of the workshops that WYSA has pre-paid for, and we actively encourage them to participate in these sessions. PCA Seattle staff attend our annual membership meetings to engage with our members and register workshops. Our members are also free to use the PCA materials on their websites, in partnership with PCA, to make parents aware that as a club and association we use positivity and have trained our coaches in using positive methods.

What advice do you have to sports parents?

These six words need to become part of your vocabulary: “I love to watch you play.” And variants that are age and situation appropriate; for example, when my 17 year old son’s team loses, if I just say I love watching him play it can sound inauthentic or worse, sarcastic. Instead, I’ll say something like, that was a little brutal out there today, but even so, I still loved watching you play.” I usually get a thank you.

What is your favorite PCA Tool that all coaches should use?

5-1 magic ratio! I use it at work all the time. I have a team of 4 Principal Engineers, 2 Senior Engineers, and 5 Engineers. My only female Principal Engineer was having difficulty with the staff receiving feedback from her as she was told she is “too direct.” I gave her my copy of the Double Goal coaching book. We talked about focusing on development and not the scoreboard. She has been practicing this with the staff, and also with her young son at home, with better results!

What Life Lessons can be taught on the pitch?

- How to work as a team
- How to make decisions
- Builds Self-Confidence
- Builds strength and coordination
- Develops a life-long love of fitness and movement
- Develops mental toughness/grit
- Develops resilience

“Youth sports and coaching had an enormous impact on my growth, development and discipline. I still believe that youth sports offer an amazing opportunity to teach, mentor, and build individual character in our future generations.

But we may have lost sight of some of the most important reasons to play sports — to build community, develop lifetime habits of fitness, and most of all, the emphasis on teamwork. This is why PCA has been so important to our communities for the last 20 years and why moving forward, it will be even more important as we embrace this opportunity to ‘reset’ sports.”
